A Ballad for Legal Ballots feat. Bill Barr

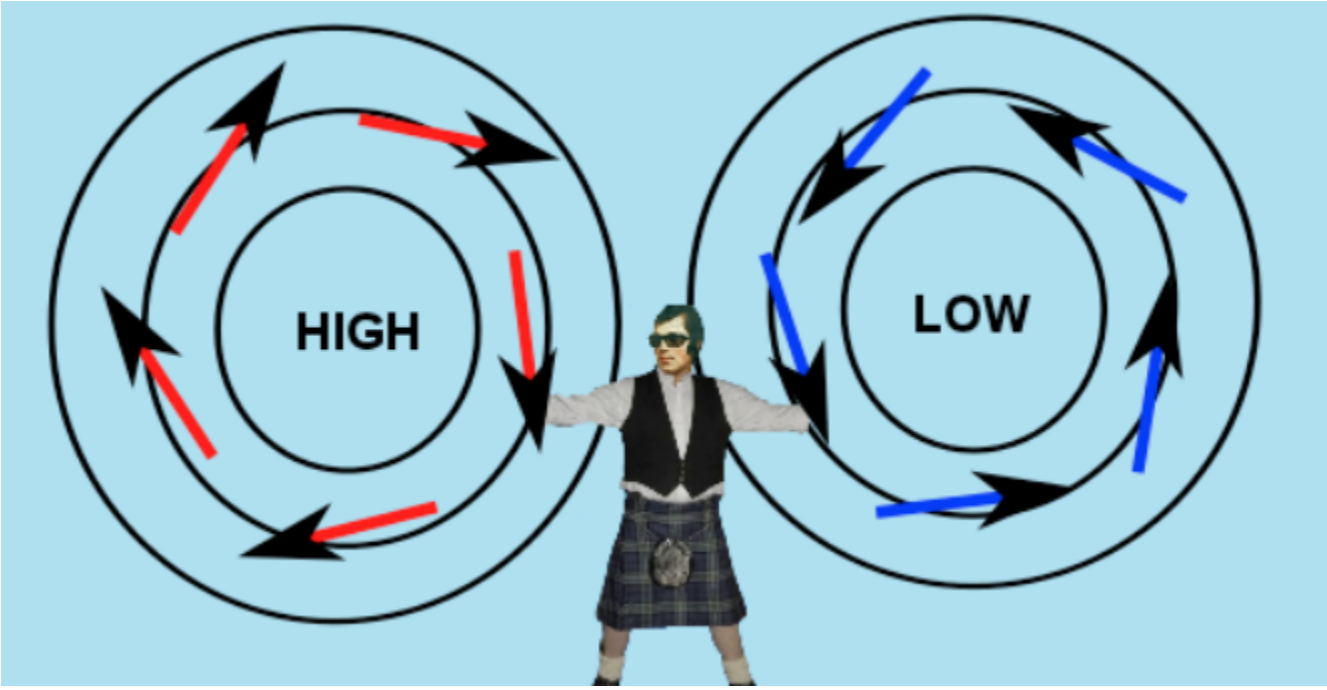
Tony Odarg November 10, 2020



We love our ballots folks, and we want as many ballots to come in, but they have to come in LEGALLY. When Democrats send their ballots, they're not sending their best. They're sending ballots that have lots of problems. They're bringing fake ballots. They're bringing altered ballots. They're fraudulent. And some, I assume, are good ballots. – Will Wescott

The Attorney General, Bill Barr, has authorized the Department of Justice to probe the 2020 election for possible voting irregularities. I suspect they will find some shenanigans, which is to be expected in a country of three-hundred and twenty million people, but I don't think it will swing the election. Perhaps if I had skin the game, like Trump cultists, I would favor a complete redo. Alas, I couldn't care less and besides, I have long argued that the electoral college should be abolished. The last two elections wouldn't have been contested at all, as both Hillary Clinton and Joe Biden won many million more votes than Trump did. Sean last did some excellent, unemotional analysis of possible fraud, which I will summarize here:

> There are also five significant lines of statistical evidence suggesting fraud.
>
> First, in PA, where by exit polls Biden won those over 65 by only 3 points (CNN, 2020), 69 people recorded as being born before 1900 requested (and most returned) ballots of which 80% were registered democrats and 16% of which were registered republicans, meaning this isn't well explained by random birth day entry errors.
>
> A second line of evidence concerns mail-in ballots not only in PA but also in MI. Specifically, Biden's advantage in Mail-in/Absentee votes in PA (+60.5) and MI (+37.9) was several times what it was in any other swing state (+6.3).
>
> A third line of statistical evidence involves Wisconsin. After the nighttime pause in reporting, vote shares shifted in favor of democrats within city wards, meaning this was not due to more democratic areas reporting later, and this was more true the more behind democrats were in a given ward, contrary to what an explanation based on late mail in voters would predict.
>
> The fourth line of statistical evidence also involved Wisconsin, and specifically Milwaukee. As noted by the BBC, extremely high turnout in certain areas is a classic sign of voter fraud. In Australia, where voting is legally mandatory, voter turnout rates reach 90-95%. Non compulsory elections should not approach these sorts of numbers.
>
> A fifth and final line of evidence concerns so called bell weather counties. These are counties where the person who wins the county almost always wing the presidential race. As a set, they've correctly predicted every US election of the last 50 years, until this one.

Sean concludes with a caveat and his view of what should be done:

> Importantly, these arguments have not shown that Trump would have certainly won the election absent any voter fraud. But they do show that the official election results do not justify us in thinking that Biden would have won a fair election either. Given this, to ensure fairness we need to either find a way to remove ballots that are fraudulent, or throw out the entire election and have a re-do.

There is no chance a recount much less a redo will occur. We have already seen the Supreme Court decide an election back in 2000, and it is not impossible that Trump sues all the way there. He was already suggested as much. Remember, the Supreme Court decided in favor of George Bush in 2000, even though there is no evidence that he won Florida. And that was with a 5-4 conservative majority. We now have a 6-3 conservative majority. Trump may just barely skirt to a second term, although I highly doubt it.
